All courses are accredited according to the European Credit Transfer System (ECTS).

COURSE DESCRIPTION

What does it mean to live in a surveillance society? How does the digital age challenge questions regarding privacy, individuality and freedom? When does surveillance as care tip over into surveillance as control? And how does the Stasi system of vigilance prefigure contemporary surveillance culture? This course will on the one hand examine the impact of surveillance on society by looking at the multifaceted ways technologies, societies and the arts interact; and on the other hand, it will reflect on surveillance in a totalitarian context while comparing observation techniques in the GDR with contemporary surveillance methods. We will also explore how surveillance is represented in contemporary literature, film and popular culture. The course will map out important themes with regards to surveillance and its repercussions (e.g., visibility, identity, privacy and control). The course provides an overview of the interdisciplinary field of surveillance studies and covers the latest research in the following major areas: 1. Relationship between surveillance, power and social control; 2. Histories of Surveillance: GDR and the Stasi (especially in the context of Berlin) 2. The concept of privacy; 3. Surveillance in the arts and popular culture.

COURSE OBJECTIVES AND LEARNING OUTCOMES

The objective of this Bachelor-level course is to equip students with an in-depth understanding of the Stasi and the phenomenon of surveillance and enable them to read, understand and critically reflect on the most recent theoretical research in surveillance studies.

By the end of the course, students will be able to:

- understand the origins of surveillance in contemporary society
- be familiar with the observation methods of the Stasi
- critically assess the changing social processes in surveillance culture
- employ surveillance theories
- examine the effects of surveillance on individuals and cultural production through analyzing novels and other material

READINGS

Students will be provided with reading material.
